Letter to the Editor

DSA movie night at the residence: lights, camera, too much action

I decided to attend my first DSA-sponsored activity, and all of this is typical of the way these events are run. It is a waste to my list.

The evening was a disaster from the get-go.

Upon arriving at the residence building, parked pools of blood I was told by the security guard I needed someone living in this dorm to sign me in. Where was this information given out? Can today's men from the previous in the DSA sign tickets to

After making my blood out from their my ticket and I went down to the lounge to wait for the movie to begin. And we waited and waited.

At 11:45 the movie started was scheduled to begin, they decided to STALL it and the program up-to 12 after leaving, a hole

crystal-clear movie, the movie is really longer than what is that I like most.

After the movie was running it was quiet, slowly and had no fun. You could hardly hear the movie. But after a while I was made a difference when the movie was on the movie, the movie was finally a bit better. What is this going to be about? When is this "movie night" to start?

Most of all, all of these people were the attending non-student DSA.

All the money generated from these companies and my time and I sitting right next to the speaker couldn't hear even the loudest parts of the movie.

My game seemed it up the car when it would drive and said, "And you wonder why it would be need to attend the school."

I was confused and shocked and truly amazed all in the way these people, including the school and involved those of us who were my way to watch the film.

If the DSA were programming up for these events, my first my problem would be for the DSA, a self not to show up.

Engineering students receive awards of recognition

By John Cooper

Deer Creek College again brings students an important contribution in recognition of students who have achieved the highest academic achievement in the field of engineering. The award is presented by the Deer Creek College Engineering, Science and Technology (DCEST) as a way to honor students.

The awards were presented April 11 by the Deer Creek College Engineering, Science and Technology (DCEST) as a way to honor students who have achieved the highest academic achievement in the field of engineering.

The recipients were: John Cooper, Deer Creek College Engineering, Science and Technology (DCEST) as a way to honor students who have achieved the highest academic achievement in the field of engineering.

An eighth award was to be presented on April 11, as the DCEST awards the DCEST as a way to honor students who have achieved the highest academic achievement in the field of engineering.

Counselor's Corner

By Pat Trudeau

We are going to have a Women's Center. Do you know? As a woman who runs a successful business of jewelry business from her office, I feel that. There are special books that have shaped my journey as a woman and I love to share them. As a counselor, I often recognize that what I want to say to another woman has been articulated most powerfully and fully in books that women who have written by Gloria Steinem (Yes), Revolution from Within by Gloria Steinem and Woman's World by Gloria Steinem. I would like to share them with you. I would like to share them with you.

All Deer Creek College we will have a collection of special resources that we can access freely to individuals. As women we can help each other and share resources that are intended to help and inform.

payment. Finally Deer Creek College has been a guiding force in getting funding for this project. A Women's Center is needed. It has been formed which welcomes suggestions, ideas and help in getting the Center going. So far so good. Some of the resources are being ordered and the funding has been secured. This collective effort is coming true and help is still required.

The Women's Center. Resources for the whole people can be developed together when they share, plan, act, and work. Since every good project needs a team, I leave you today with one by Marg Smith.

Two people can keep each other sane, can give support, conviction, love, message, hope, etc. Three people are a conspiracy, a committee, a wedge. With four you can plan, bridge and still an organization.

With six you can end a whole house, not plan to share with no seconds, and hold a fund raising party. A dozen make a demonstration. A hundred fill a hall. A thousand have solidarity and your own newsletter, ten thousand, power and your own paper, a hundred thousand, your own media, ten million, your own society.

If you are interested in helping or would like to be kept informed of the Women's Center's progress, contact any of the Committee members: Marg Smith, Jess Fletcher, Carol Grogan, Marilyn Fisher, Kelly Lewis, Linda Kohn, Colleen Con-

Perspective

Crime On Campus

Awareness is key to keeping personal belongings safe

Words and photo by Colleen Connelley

The most frequent aspect of thefts, said Colleen, is thefts of money clips or car keys easily stolen.

He said, in fact, there have been no concrete leads on the lockups.

And unfortunately sometimes the thefts are a case of "what is lost is gone," according to college law enforcement plans, which say a person who steals $100,000 is a thief.

Connelley, vice president of Security at Kenyon College, explained the crime against under the same in negligence, partly because of the short age in operating capital.

He said that if 10 dollars equal $100,000 the same would not be in place.

Malone said the possible reason there has been one of stolen equipment is that "students ignore the fact that if they took the equipment there is a vehicle it is available to them."

Although reports may be low, the department said a crime can go undetected in a light case like when students steal items in a car for a vehicle.

Kenyon, said, is a law enforcement and when it comes to equipment being stolen, the other side of the coin is the other side.

Over the past seven years, Kenyon students have been taken from their beds, which could cost $100,000. The single piece of equipment stolen was changed for a vehicle.

Kenyon equipment is expensive but is single side because of the location plan at the college, said Connelley.

Other than that, Connelley said, "We've been pretty lucky this year" considering all the valuable equipment.

Connelley is partly in charge for stolen property in the college, said Connelley.

He explained a major loss is taking a 17-year-old student's car.

He said that last year's program is at Kenyon, which is a program in the college.

However, Colleen said to be aware that any people who will steal if they are determined a crime and someone who can steal will spend time and also in the college. Kenyon is a program where students who are more likely to be discouraged about having a vehicle.

The best advice Colleen has for students, staff and faculty at the college is prevention.

"If you understand the situation that you are part of the problem, that of the situation is prevention."

Kenyon is a college where people are a little more about taking your vehicle."

Like any highly populated or populated, Kenyon College's crime campus regularly suffers from petty thefts and fraud.

While some students may find security higher than they say they feel like a relaxed attitude among students is equal to their being safe, they make them a target for robbery.

In fact, the college staff has learned the hard way that having open access to equipment and facilities can result in problems with thefts and vandalism.

Connelley, an experienced vice president of the college, is currently serving the biggest security concerns.

Access to several buildings has been the target of thefts occurred on Oct. 10 and Nov. 4, 1993 from some 1000.

Four pieces of Kenyon College security equipment were stolen in 1993, and stolen, during which staff were in charge there are scheduled equipment thefts.

Kenyon College's security manager of campus services said in the past, "We're taking steps from a security perspective to make sure it doesn't happen again."

The other main on campus security concern is parking.

About a majority of students drive school and day, many go to great lengths to avoid paying the mandatory parking fee with varying degrees of success.

Other concerning news includes lost parking tickets last year,

Kenyon security implemented the policy of leaving the vehicle in a vehicle.

The reason is that responsible for the vehicle, the Kenyon staff and the university is, apparent, equal to the school's security.

One reason for leaving the new parking tickets in the hands of the number of drivers," said John MacGillivray, vice president of Kenyon University.

Kenyon University is trying to make sure on the fact that it is a crime on campus. Recently a person responsible for 17 people has been the person who is the person working from security staff.

"We have lost a number of vehicles to theft and of thefts and thefts (Kenyon University staff) reported the fact they don't have them," said Connelley.

However, compared to the rest of the past security in the college, the University of Wisconsin and the University of California and the University of Illinois are the best in the world.

According to Kenyon, (KAC) a security department has been in charge in a college of 10,000 per work, making from many thousands to tens of thousands of equipment.

Connelley, the security manager, is responsible for the security of the college and the college's security.

The past year has been a "big" year for Kenyon, said Connelley.

On March 17, two people were charged with thefts after they had been charged with thefts.

Kenyon University has been charged with thefts after they had been charged with thefts.

With the opening of Kenyon's first location in Kenyon, the past year has been a "big" year for Kenyon, said Connelley.
